

UCLA EXTENSION PUBLIC POLICY PROGRAM

NEW TOPIC!

MAINSTREAMING NATURAL HAZARDS and CRISIS COMMUNICATION INTO COMMUNITY PLANNING

WEDNESDAY,
OCTOBER 7, 2009
WESTIN PASADENA HOTEL

This new seminar emphasizes creating sustainable communities by mainstreaming mitigation of natural and human-caused hazards in design and development. Instruction clarifies federal and state law regarding mitigation of wildfires, floods, earthquakes, landslides storms, and sea level rise hazards, risk, and vulnerability, and outlines best practices from design, environmental, administrative, and communications professions that enhance sustainability by reducing disaster losses. Includes special emphasis on ways to secure stakeholder commitment to attaining greater resilience.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

Planners, engineers, administrators, community leaders, and emergency managers who prepare and implement general plan safety elements, federally sponsored local multi-hazard mitigation plans, hazard mitigation projects, and pre-event recovery plans; city council members; planning commissioners; planning and environmental consultants, attorneys, and developers.
